Keywords: Ground, Immediate Object, Meaning, Umberto Eco
Abstract: Argues that the triad ground/immediate object/meaning offers a clearer resonance with the texts of Charles S. Peirce and opens more surely on the great theme of community. Texts wherein immediate object, ground and meaning seem to be synonymous; Examination of the three texts that Eco uses to support his equivalence between ground, meaning and interpretant; Abductions which lead to the assertion that the triad can be viewed as the basis for a communal semiotic.
