Volition

1906 IC.I	Pragmatism	Made Easy	′ MS	IKI	325:7
-----------	------------	-----------	--------	-----	-------

In volition [...] there is always a double consciousness, the volition being at once regarded as an effort of one subject and a resistance of another. Likewise in perception there is a double consciousness of an ego and a non-ego. Thus there is a double consciousness which ought to replace the narrower volition of the old divisions of consciousness.